Spirited Away Review

Spirited Away is a Japanese film made in 2001. It was written and directed by Hayao Miyazaki and produced by Toshio Suzuki. It was a very successful film in Japan. Some of the characters in this movie are Chihiro, Haku, Lin, Kamaji and Yubaba. The plot of this movie is a 10 year old girl who goes through a journey at a spirit bathhouse. This movie shows how a spoiled girl changes so much and turns out to be pretty selfless.

The film had no flaws. It had great animation for a 2001 film and the voice actors were amazing. It was a film that got a profit of over 274 million dollars. The budget was 15 million dollars, just in America. The production of Spirited Away started in 2000. I thought this movie started out a bit confusing but it got a lot better as it went on.

The actors of "Spirited Away" are voiced in other movies. The voice for Chihiro was Daveigh Chase. The voice for Haku was Jason Marden. The voice for Yubaba was Suzanne Pleshette, and the voice for Kamaji was David Ogden Stiers. The animation was drawn by Hayao Miyazaki and voiced in English and Japanese. Miyazaki made Chihiro based off his friend's 10 year old daughter. A lot of his characters were based off of real people. The film was released on July 20, 2001. It became a very famous movie, even better than the Titanic.

Miyazaki worked very hard on this film. If I were to give a grade to this film I'd give it an A. There were a few confusing parts and a few parts that you would question, but other than that it was a pretty good movie. Everyone that helped with the film, helped a lot. Miyazaki had no limits and that's how it became such a great film.
