

Types of Evidence

Qualifiable Evidence

1. Personal observations
2. Personal experiences
3. Testimonies

Examples? When might these be useful?

One Particular Taco Bell in Chicago

Michael B.

West Rogers Park,
Chicago, IL

👥 0 friends

★ 13 reviews

📷 2 photos

★★★★★ 7/26/2018

After the remodel this TB officially has the best cinnamon twists and nacho fries. The staff is super friendly and is willing to let you order by memory. The green mood lighting is icing on the cake (or taco).

John C. voted for this review

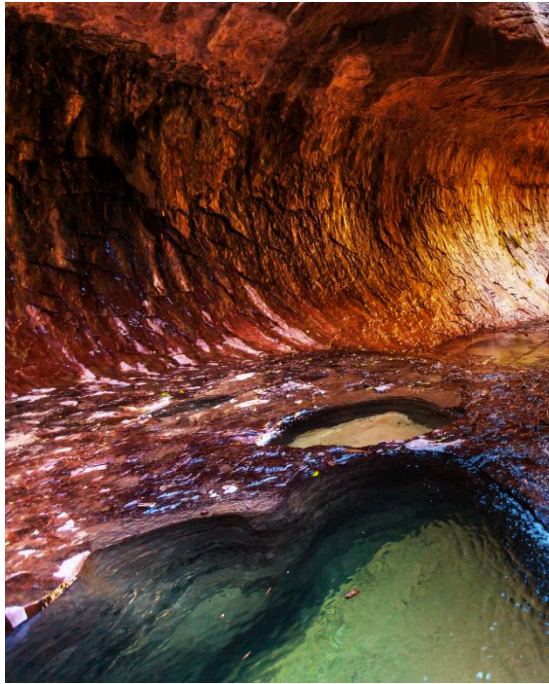

💡 Useful

😄 Funny 1

😎 Cool 1

Zion National Park

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ 7/2/2014

Never again. Perfect if you are either a dedicated hiker or a family stroller. Paved walkways and short "trails" for the latter set, and cross-country all day hikes for the former. Scenery is grand and huge and up in the air and distant and impersonal. I got bored fast, and the 109° heat didn't help in the least. East of the tunnel the sandstone scenery is much more dramatic, but the turnouts are small and feel dangerous if you have young kids. Inside the park we ate at the sit down restaurant. Salmon cakes were good. The taco bar incredibly boring but may be suited for kids. It looked like more interesting food was in the town. Avoid Zion and head to Bryce if you want moderate hikes (3 hours) with far more intimate and still grand scenery no matter which way you look or how close or distant your gaze.

