

“Why Dogs Chase Cats” and “King Long Shanks”

Dogs, cats, and frogs can't talk, but in these stories they do. “King Long Shanks” and “Why Dogs Chase Cats” are very similar. Both stories have at least one character that can't talk in real life, but they talk in these stories. In “King Long Shanks” all the characters are frogs that can talk. “Why Dogs Chase Cats” have three animals that can talk: a dog, a cat, and a wolf. One character in each story is mad another character(s). King Long Shanks is mad at the tailors and Cat is mad at Dog. At the end of these folk tails King Long Shanks is still mad at the tailors and Cat is still mad at Dog. Dog tried so hard to make cat forgive him. “Nothing Dog said could change Cat's mind.” Some weren't happy, but every character made it to where they needed to go. King Long Shanks made it to the parade. Cat made it to Adams house and Dog made it to Seth's house. “Why Dogs Chase Cats” is a lot better story, in my opinion. It's more direct and easier to follow.
