

Clay in Education

Bring an Artist into your Classroom

The Local Clay organization was founded to promote the exchange of knowledge and information about the ceramic arts. Our Clay in Education program gives potters within our membership the opportunity to share their knowledge and expertise through demonstrations, workshops and art projects, in schools and other organizations. Through Clay in Education, we strive to convey the love of clay and creativity to students of all ages.

Albert Einstein said that "Creativity is intelligence having fun."

Local Clay provides compensation for member clay artists as they go out into the community, teaching clay through demonstrations, workshops and projects in schools and other venues. Clay artists can provide workshops for teachers, classrooms, home schooling parents, seniors or other community organizations.

To learn more about the Clay in Education program or to inquire about having a Clay Artist bring creativity to your classroom contact us at education@clayfest.org.

Funding for Clay in Education comes from membership contributions, sales of donated ceramic work by members, and donations from the general public at our annual Clay Fest show and sale each October.
