Greetings,

Please share the below opportunity with your teachers. They must fill out the registration form (link below) to reserve a spot. More information will then be sent about the course at a later time. If staff have questions, please direct them to the flyer (attached) with more information. The registration asks about WREN affiliation. Yes. We are part of WREN.

Description:

Washington Ethnic Studies Now, in collaboration with the University of Oregon, with funding provided by the Educator Advancement Council, is offering a professional development series on critical race theory, culturally sustaining pedagogies, and ethnic studies during three class sessions to be offered virtually via Zoom scheduled from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. June 22, 23, and 24, 2021. Teachers will be provided with professional development units and a $1,000 stipend upon completion of the course, and $200 in books and materials for the classroom. The course will be engaging and interactive. The goal across the three days will be to actively involve participants in the exploration of race and critical consciousness and to incorporate these new concepts into professional practice.
