

BELL RINGER RESPONSE SHEET: WEEK 4

Monday MISTAKES

Correct the errors in the following paragraph.

When St. Patrick's day rolls around, people traditionally adorn green, but did you know that green has absolutely nothing to do with St. Patrick. St. Patrick actually often wore blue, a color that was tied to Ireland during Henry VII's reign. The tradition of associating green with Ireland came around later in the 1800's. During this time, the Irish wanted independence from the British and chose green as a symbolic color for their country.
