

Speech & Language Activities

Week of: April 20, 2020

A Message to Families: Your child's presence has certainly been missed for the past several weeks! I wanted to touch base during this week of trying out new distance learning platforms. Please continue to reach out to me via my Google link (<https://forms.gle/d5m5PugaTY7k58YP9>) or phone (541-357-6961) if you have any questions regarding activities below or how I can help support your child's learning at home. As always, simply playing, reading books or talking with your child promotes better speech and language skills as well. -Miss Shelley, SLP

Use Your Words!

It looks like the squirrels are trying to figure out what to do when they are home in their tree all day with no school - just like us! Help them by answering the questions below.

- 1) Share with the squirrels 2 fun games they could play while they are home and why you think they would like them.
- 2) Tell the squirrels about something tasty you ate at home that they could make at their house.

Listening Ears!

Squirrels love to hide things! Use an object in your house and pretend it is a nut. Take turns with your family hiding this object and then giving them clues about where it is (e.g. it is hiding under something I put on my feet). Listen carefully when someone gives you clues!

Articulation

Think of 5 things with your speech sound the squirrels might find in your yard or house! Say them outloud 5 times or use them each in a sentences. Use your best speech.

Social Skills

How do the squirrels feel? Tell someone 3 clues you see in their body, the environment or their facial expressions that helped you figure out how they felt.

Are the squirrels using good social skills to interact?

Tell me about:

- *how they are using their eyes to think about each other
- *how they are using their bodies to think about each other
